Now online: ArcelorMittal in Luxembourg

Luxembourg, 17 June 2013 - ArcelorMittal announces today the launch of a new website for ArcelorMittal Luxembourg. It is now online at <http://luxembourg.arcelormittal.com>. Local news and releases can be found there, an overview about the main production and administrative facilities is available as well as information about ArcelorMittal's engagement as a responsible corporate citizen. Furthermore there are exciting stories about the latest product innovations and also information for those interested in exploring job opportunities.

Not only that ArcelorMittal has its worldwide headquarters and main administration offices in the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, it also runs various steelmaking operations in the country, representing a total of 16 different sites and units throughout Luxembourg. Steel production facilities include long, flat and wire products. ArcelorMittal also owns a R&D Center in Esch-sur-Alzette, designed for research in long products. ArcelorMittal Luxembourg is a top producer of long products like heavy beams and steel sheet piles that provide innovative solutions at its largest sites in Belval and Differdange. In 2012 ArcelorMittal announced an investment plan of 150 million EUR until 2016 to secure the future of steelmaking in Luxembourg.

Luxembourg's tradition in steelmaking dates back more than 100 years. With the new website, the group now offers a fascinating insight to what ArcelorMittal Luxembourg is contributing today to the national economy and the European steel industry. "The focus on our higher value added products, our continuous R&D efforts for automotive and construction steels - combined with excellent customer services - will enable us further to keep and extend our leading position as sustainable steelmaker in Luxembourg", comments Michel Wurth, member of the Group Management Board at ArcelorMittal.
